Headline:
Feeling colder today. Blustery showers or spells of rain.

Today:
Mainly dry and bright to start, but rather windy. Cloudier with an increased chance of showers or a longer period of rain late morning and early afternoon. Drier later and less windy, though some showers still affecting Norfolk and Suffolk. Maximum temperature 8 deg C (46 deg F).

Tonight:
Mostly clear skies overnight leading to a rather widespread frost. Showers affecting the far east of the region, these increasingly turning to sleet or snow at low levels. Remaining breezy. Minimum temperature -1 deg C (30 deg F).

Thursday:
Bright or sunny periods in the west and likely remaining dry. Cloudier further east. Some wintry showers near coasts through the day. Brisk winds at first, easing later. Feeling cold. Maximum temperature 4 deg C (39 deg F).

Outlook for Friday to Sunday:
Rain sweeping east early Friday, then dry, bright and cold later. Breezy, chilly and occasionally wet on Saturday. Probably drier Sunday with lighter winds, though still rather cold.
